Risk Assessment

Aim: to minimise known risks

Where in the production, distribution and consumption of a product or service does risk occur?

Then statutory rules to reduce risks

The Factories Act; health and safety; machine guards....

Not always done, but the principle is sacrosanct

In alcohol we already do this for production (health and safety) product specification (distilling regulations) distribution (licensing) and but not for marketing

Risk Assessment

- Unhealthy promotion harms to children:
 - Energy dense food, tobacco and alcohol

The three cornerstones of public health

Risk Assessment

- Even industry accepts :
 - marketing effects, albeit only at a brand level
 - and health effects, albeit down-played
- All agree the need to protect children
 - Especially for adult-only products like alcohol
- The debate is about how to regulate

How alcohol marketing works

The nature of advertising, marketing & business

- Subtle: artful association rather than overt sales pitch

‘Substantial evidence now shows that judgements and behaviours, including those relating to consumption, can be strongly influenced by implicitly acquired affective associations, rather than via consciously mediated persuasive information. Contemporary advertising formats typically targeted at children are particularly likely to ‘implicitly persuade’ in this way’

(Nairn A and Fine C 2008)

The rules

One of the most common concerns we hear about online ads is that the content of an ad was misleading, and sometimes that includes uncertainty as to whether the content you've seen online is advertising or not. The rules in this area state:

- Ads must be obviously identifiable as such
- Ads must not materially mislead or be likely to do so

<http://www.asa.org.uk/~media/Files/ASA/Hot%20Topics/Spotting%20Online%20Ads.ashx>

Advertisers are allowed to make their ads appealing, including by making the content more similar to interesting editorial content, but advertisers must be cautious that, in seeking to make ads more inviting, they do not camouflage their advertisements.

- Multifaceted; a 'marcomms' mix of channels designed to
 - achieve specific aims
 - complement wider mix
 - no one channel matters

SMART aims focused on profitability – usually further simplified into sales*

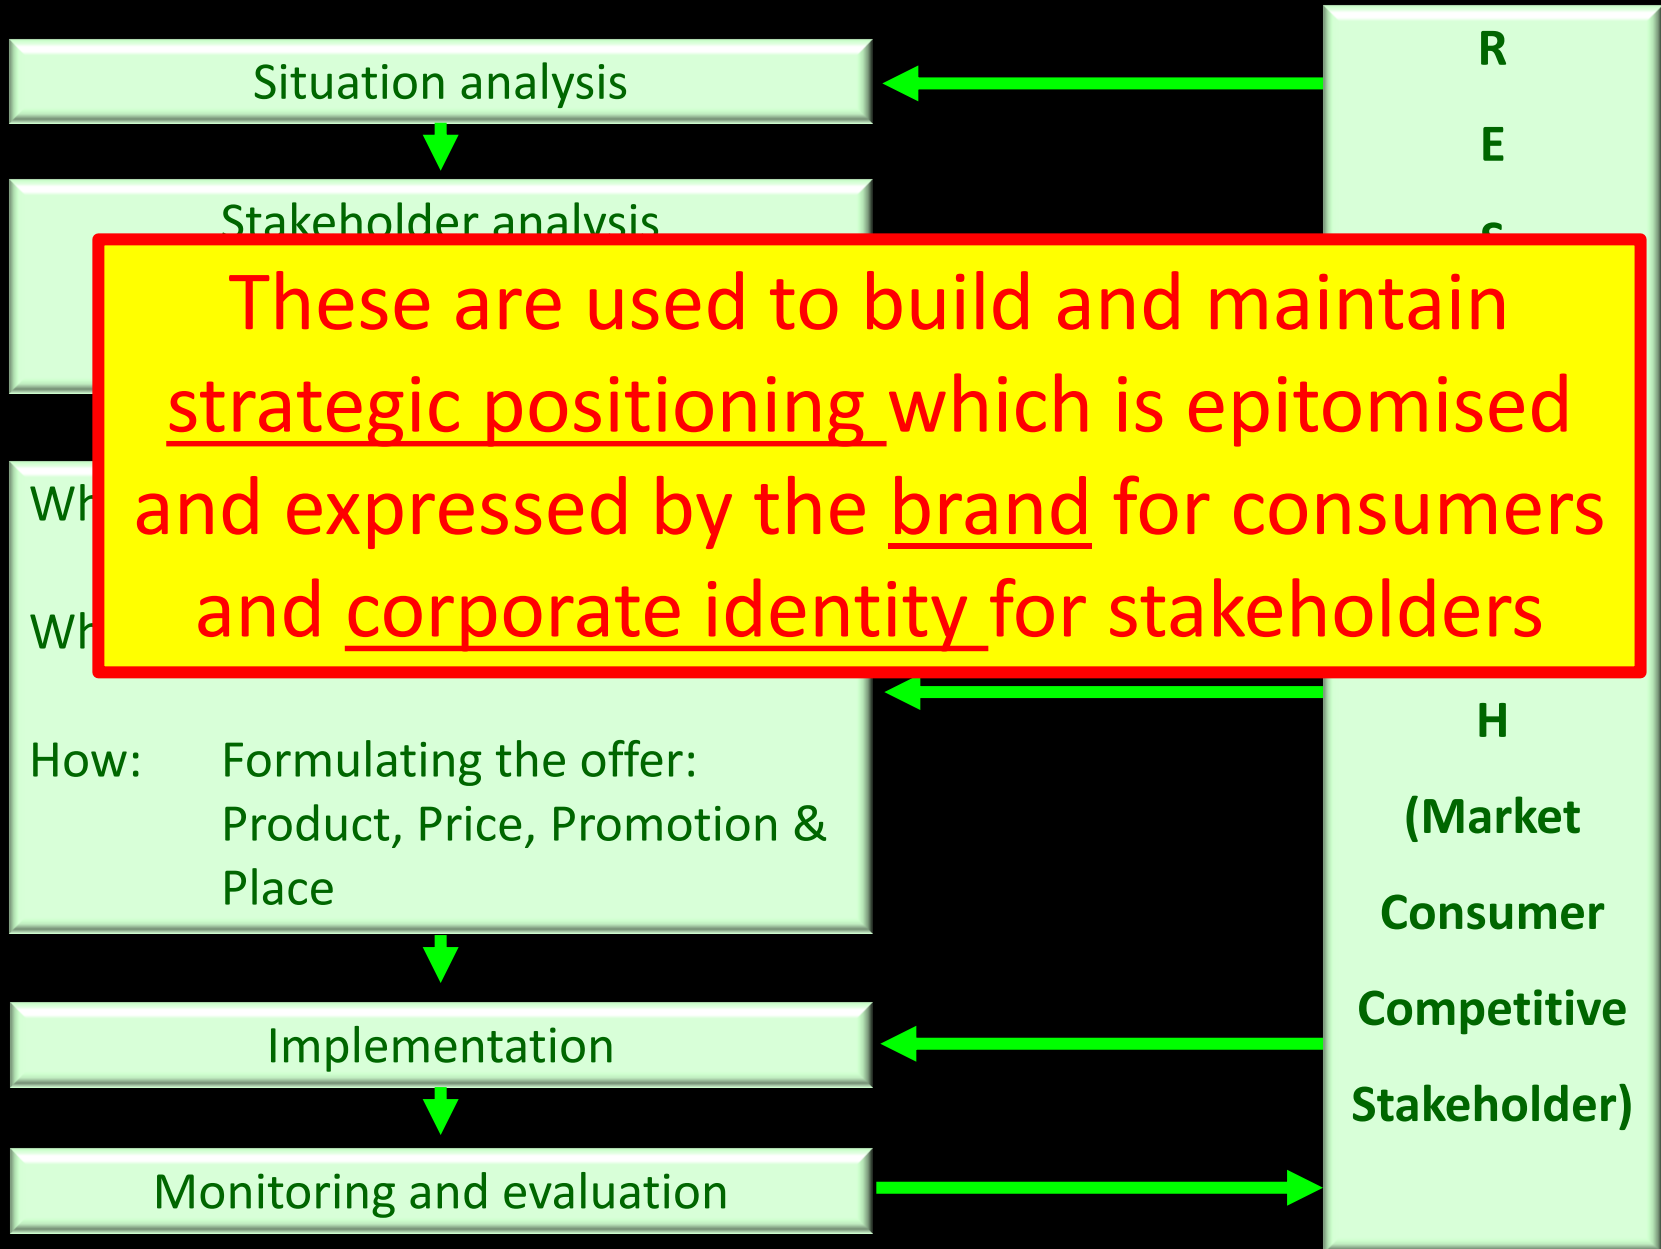

Multifaceted and complementary tool box – the whole is greater than the sum of the parts

Strategic planning to define and guide progress

Strategic Planning

The fiduciary imperative

Corporations spend shareholders (stockholders in the US) money so they have to prioritise their financial interests. Social responsibility will always be servant to these interests.

→ Single-minded focus on fiscal returns

- Clear, measurable objectives

We have been here before with tobacco

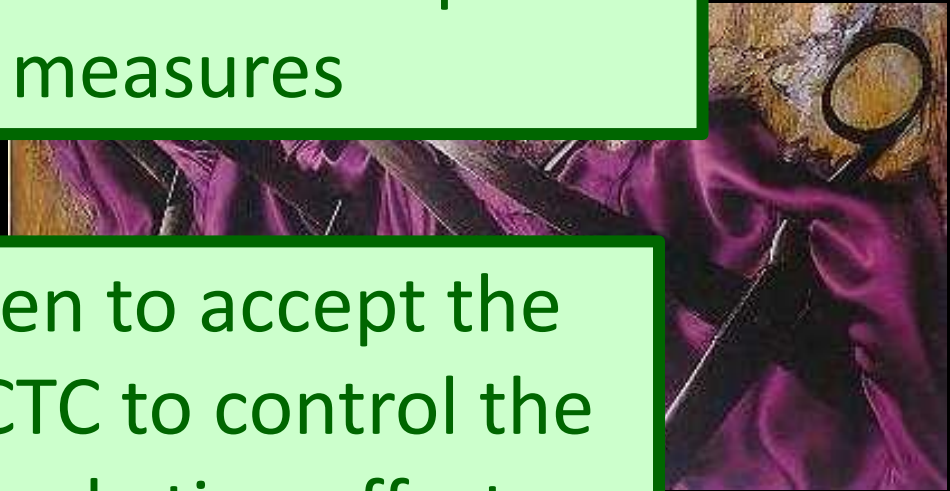

It took us thirty years to learn that progress comes only from radically reducing exposure to marcomms with comprehensive and adaptable control measures

Content

The failure of partial measures:

tv ads were

And another ten to accept the need for the FCTC to control the rest of the marketing effort

Industry involvement that just led to delays and prevarication

A vision for the future

Professor V.S. Mihajlov (former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics)

“Although this might be unrealistic at the present time, and indeed even ridiculous. I for my part am convinced that the day will come when international health law will contain rules at eliminating drunkenness, alcoholism and tobacco use, all of which cause enormous damage to health.

Certain actions could indeed be carried out forthwith, examples being the development of conventions prohibiting advertising of tobacco products or strengthening international cooperation in efforts to combat the smuggling of alcohol beverages.”
